

Claes Carstensen also owned this house, next door to his own home. He sold it, October 15, 1653, to Jan Nagel, of Limburg.—Liber HH: 55 (Albany).

Nagel married, in September, 1652, Grietje Dircks, widow of Jan Schut, who had been killed while trading at the South River.—Rec. N. Am., I: 64.

In 1658, Grietje was married to her third husband, Barent Gerritsen, of Overysseel.—Marriages in Ref. Dutch Ch., 22. Guardians were appointed for the two families of children.

Jan Schut's little daughter, Fytje Jans, was seven years old. She was to receive 150 florins. Jurriaen Jansen Nagel was five years of age; Styntje, the baby, two years and six months. They each received 75 florins. Their mother was living in her house "lying and being north of the High Street, opposite de hal." [2] Min. of Orph. Court, trans. by O'Callaghan, 54-5.

Grietje and her last husband sold the house to Asser Levy, June 8, 1662.—Liber Deeds, A: 268. Jochem Backer was confirmed here in 1667.—Patents, II: 67 (Albany).
